CONNECTIONS TO OJISTOH

Shelley Niro & René Francisco

images from the workshop production with Brantford Native Housing

september 11 - october 4 2009

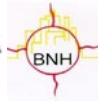

Three weeks in August, two senior artists worked with BNH staff and residents at Ojistoh House on the design and construction of a deck. The collaborative process bridged cultures, and diffused the barriers between art and everyday life. The deck as a sculptural structure is integrated into the living space of the transitional house, a shelter for women who are starting a new life. Building the deck in collaboration with the women, the artists collected new experiences and ideas.
